Hampstead Heath Looking Towards Harrow ('5 o' clock afternoon: August 1821 very fine bright & wind after rain slightly in the morning') 1821 John Constable

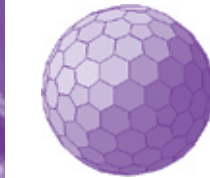

The Inklings was a literary discussion group associated with the University of Oxford, England. Its members, mostly academics at the university, included J.R.R. Tolkien and C.S. Lewis. The Inklings were literary enthusiasts who praised the value of narrative in fiction, and encouraged the writing of fantasy. Although Christian values were notably reflected in several members' work, there were also Atheists among the members of the discussion group.

The sculpture (one of seven from a mould by George Frampton) was supposed to be modelled upon a photograph of Michael Llewelyn Davies—a ward of J.M. Barrie,—but the sculptor decided to use a different child as a model. It left Barrie very disappointed with the result. It doesn't show the devil in Peter, he said

A possible etymological derivation of Yoda's name derives directly from the Sanskrit and the more commonly known Hindu practice of yoga. As a Jedi master, Yoda leads Luke and others through spiritual and meditational practices in order to reach a greater understanding of life. In the book of Psalms in the bible, there is an author named Yodh

Spirituality is, in a narrow sense, a concern with matters of the spirit, however that may be defined; but it is also a wide term with many available readings. It may include belief in supernatural powers, as in religion, but the emphasis is on personal experience. It may be an expression for life perceived as higher, more complex or more integrated with one's worldview, as contrasted with the merely sensual

The Wicker Man (1973) is a cult British horror film that depicts a remote Scottish island, once barren, which flourishes with vegetation after the arrival of Lord Summerisle and his Pagan practices

In the late 1940s Sheena Govan emerged as an informal spiritual teacher to a small circle that included Peter Caddy and Dorothy Maclean. Eileen Caddy joined them in the early 1950s. In late 1962 they became unemployed and settled in a caravan near the village of Findhorn. They began organic gardening as a way of growing food. To this activity they brought their spiritual practices, which they believed led to communication with nature spirits, under whose guidance the garden flourished

The Golden Cockerel Press, like Virginia Woolf's and other British presses, used founts of Caslon Old Face, which, with Eric Gill's illustrations in combination, created criticism of the wood engravings for being 'too black to go with type'. It was decided that the Press should have its own type, robust enough in its design to match their images, for an ambitious collaboration for a new production of The Four Gospels.
